Hope Wins Fifth Conference Tilt; Fist Fight Added

Roy Taylor, White of El Dorado, Engage in Brief Battle on Floor

NO DAMAGE IS DONE

Norman Green Leads Bobcats to 53 to 13 Victory Over El Dorado

Fists flew for a moment Thursday night on the Hope High School basketball floor to calm the conference cage battle between Hope and El Dorado High Schools. The Bobcats won the game, 53 to 13.

The unscheduled fist fight was between Roy Taylor, Hope guard, and White, husky 200-pound forward of the El Dorado team. Coaches separated the two players before any damage was done.

Later, White came to Taylor, shook hands and apologized for "losing his head."

The two players were banished from the game by Referee Paul Philbrick early in the fourth quarter. Both players retired to their respective benches without further words.

White suddenly rose from the bench, walked nonchalantly to the Hope bench and upon reaching Taylor put over a right punch to the jaw. It caught Taylor off guard. Taylor then sprang to his feet and the two swapped punches before they were pulled apart.

Getting back to the game, it was the fifth conference victory of the season for Coach Hammons' men who appear to be headed for the thick of the battle for the Arkansas High School conference championship.

Hope, Jonesboro and Little Rock, leaders of the conference, each have one loss in conference competition. Jonesboro and Little Rock meet this week-end in a double-header at Jonesboro. Should the two teams split the series, it would move Hope into top position.

Against El Dorado Thursday night, the Bobcats took the lead at the beginning of the game and steadily added to their score as the battle progressed.

Mermon Green, Bobcat forward, won high scoring honors with 21 points. Baker was runner-up with 13 points.

Out of El Dorado led his team with six points.

The Bobcats will play four games next week, meeting Waldo Munday and Tuesday nights; and Texarkana, (Ark.) Thursday and Friday nights.

Couch Hammons is planning on staging a few boxing matches between halves in an effort to attract more fans to the games. The attendance in the past few games has been disappointing, considering the fact that Hope has one of its best teams in history.

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark.—A new individual scoring record here was made Wednesday night by Bill Godwin in a game in which Blytheville Chicks defeated Forest City, 54 to 25. Godwin scored 14 field goals and two free throws for 30 points.

Would Woo Ducks to Improve Hunting

ST. LOUIS. — (P) — Missouri duck hunters want the privilege of making ducks comfortable when they migrate through Missouri; they would like to feed them so the ducks will sit down, relax, eat, take things easy—and be shot.

Such was the hunters' request sent recently by the Missouri Duck Hunters Association to game officials. The hunters said the game restrictions that prohibit feeding and the use of decoys have just about taken all the ducks out of duck shooting.

Answers on Page Two

That "in spite of everything" covers a lot of ground, for Congressman Patman woke up the other day to discover himself enrolled in the growing army of those who mistook the notorious Coster-Musica, of McKesson and Robbins, for a gentleman, a scholar and an honest man.

This looked like a body blow at his campaign to get through Congress a bill restricting the operations of chain stores. Mr. Patman had made speeches here and there about the country for pay; McKesson and Robbins had sponsored some of those speeches; the implication was that the anti-chain store bill, far from being a blow against "the interests" in behalf of the plain people, was a scheme to relieve big manufacturers from the necessity of making huge discounts to chain store buyers.

Mr. Patman discussed all of this in detail on the floor of the House the other day. He says the McKesson-backed speeches concerned a bill relating to price discriminations in wholesale and retail trade, passed long before his chain store bill was introduced.

Anyway, he is still fighting for the chain store bill.

Bill Was No Build-Up
Congressman Patman is a strapping chap with a beaming smile, a receding line of rather curly hair, and the general appearance of a silver-tongued statesman. He remarks rather sorrowfully that to accomplish anything in congress you have to make enemies, and says that certain members are exceedingly jealous.

"You know," he says, "when I first came to congress, in 1923, I introduced my veterans' bill—the bill to pay 50 per cent of the soldier's bonuses immediately—and some of the older fellows in congress came around to me and talked like this.

"They said: 'Now, son, you've got a good bill there—an awful good bill. You nurse it along and play with it, but don't push it too hard or you might get it passed. If you don't get it passed, why can you stay in congress 20 years on that one bill?'

"That sort of thing happens, you know. A fellow will introduce a bill and won't really try to get it passed. It makes good stuff to talk about back home. Each campaign he can go back and talk about his bill, and tell how he must be returned to congress so he can fight for it. That way he gets re-elected.

"But I got my veterans' bill through. I secured passage of a bill involving millions of men and billions of dollars. They got Andy Mellon out of the way and—"

Your correspondent interrupted to say "Huh?"

Did Mellon Duck?

Mr. Patman pointed out that in December of 1931 he brought impeachment charges against Secretary Mellon in the House of Representatives. The charges were referred to the House Judiciary Committee, and Mr. Patman spent a week bringing in evidence to prove that Mr. Mellon had violated the law by allowing to own a business or businesses while serving as head of the Treasury Department.

In January of 1932, he said, just when it was time for Mr. Mellon's representatives at the hearing to present the secretary's side, Mr. Mellon resigned.

Anyway, getting back to the chain store bill: Mr. Patman says that he knows of upwards of 100 members of the house who will vote for the bill. There will be more, he says, and the senate will follow the house's lead.

The bill is now before the ways and means committee. Date for hearings on it has not yet been set.

Widow Defies Law to Seize Her Home

Showdown Is Expected When Thaw Comes in Mountain Area

By the AP Feature Service
CONFIER, Colo.—When the spring thaws come a showdown is scheduled between a mountain-dwelling widow and "the law."

The law—the state land board—wants the log-cabin site of 65-year-old Mrs. Le Ora Orr.

Says Mrs. Orr:
"After building it with my own hands and living in it for 30 years I won't give up my home without a struggle."

The land board, with a supreme court decision behind it now, has claimed for 10 years that the Orrs built their place on school land through a surveyor's error and has sought to oust Mrs. Orr.

Two eviction orders, no good after 90 days, have expired in the desk of Sheriff Willis Morris. With a third gathering dust there, the sheriff says: "The snow's too deep now to be running around in the hills with a simple eviction order. When the thaw comes maybe we'll get around to serving it."

State Attorney General Byron Rogers thinks the sheriff "feels sorry" for Mrs. Orr and has warned that "if he doesn't serve it we'll take drastic action." He added such action meant a citation for contempt that might put the sheriff behind his own bars.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Orr observes that a person makes a lot of hill folk friends in years of living on a mountain—and ventures the opinion she'll be in the old home for some time. Then she tells about the time she got out of a small-bore rifle and chased away a man to whom the land board had given

Recess Proposed for Legislature to Examine Bills

Would Adjourn, and Reconvene in 10 Days to Two Weeks

SENATE APPROVES

Senate Also Passes Bills Prohibiting Special Counsel

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—The Senate Friday started a movement to recess the legislature for 10 days to two weeks in order that members might have an opportunity to study the mass of bills piled up on the calendars.

The upper house adopted and transmitted immediately to the lower body a resolution by Senator Hal P. Smith of Clarendon providing for the appointment of a joint committee to confer with Attorney General Holt and Governor Bailey "in an effort to ascertain whether said recess can be taken."

Special Counsel Hit
Friday passed two more bills aimed at outlawing employment of special attorneys by the state, concentrating all legal affairs in the hands of the attorney general.

The bills were companion measures to one passed Thursday which provided that prosecuting attorneys and their deputies, under direction of the attorney general, should handle all land title confirmation suits for the state.

The house amended the Higinbotham-Kintzley auto license reduction bill to provide for decreases on a graduated scale instead of a flat one-third slash.

Hollensworth of Bradley attached an amendment to make the reductions range from $2 on small cars to $5 on trucks of more than one ton capacity.

The bill provides that if revenues from auto license and operation fees in the first year of operation fall below the $5,760,000 collected in 1933 the governor could by proclamation restore license fees to present rates.

Juveniles Get Hiawatha Instead of Hoosegow

CAMPBELL, Calif.—(P)—Justice John Blaine has his own idea of handling juvenile law breakers. Instead of jail sentences he gives them reading assignments and orders them to report back for examination on what they have learned.

A favorite work in this regard is Longfellow's "Hiawatha." Justice Blaine says it accents the rituals with which Indian tribes marked a boy's coming of age and the self discipline necessary for manhood.

5 Firemen Given Up as Dead Friday

Falling Walls Carry Them to Fiery Grave at Syracuse, N. Y.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—(P)—The plight of eight firemen buried more than five hours in the fire-scared ruins of a five-story office building was described by rescuers as "hopeless" when the structure's two remaining walls fell inward Friday.

The collapse of the two side walls of the building piled tons of additional debris upon the trapped men, who were fighting the blaze from the third floor when the roof collapsed and carried them with it into the basement.

Senate Stands by Virginia; Hits F.D.

Glass and Byrd Upheld—"No" for F. D.'s Choice for Judge

WASHINGTON.—(P)—The senate judiciary committee, adhering to the tradition that on matters of patronage senators stick together, voiced a reverberating "no" Wednesday to one of President Roosevelt's judgeship appointments.

By a vote of 15 to 3 the committee disapproved appointment of Judge Floyd H. Roberts of Bristol, Va., to be a federal district judge after Senator Glass (Dem. Va.) had charged that President Roosevelt had given "the veto power" over Virginia patronage to Governor James H. Price of Virginia.

Thus he asserted, President Roosevelt had nominated Roberts instead of either of two men recommended by him and Senator Byrd (Dem. Va.). He said the nomination was therefore "personally offensive" to himself and Byrd.

"In fact," Glass added, "we were told through the newspapers that his nomination was to be proposed as a substitute for the failure of the two senators from Virginia to vote for the measures proposed by the president of the United States."

Both Glass and Byrd are accounted among the senate's bloc of anti-administration Democrats. To that extent the controversy over the Roberts appointment served to emphasize the split in Democratic ranks.

Virginia politicians said it also underlined differences between the two senators and the present state administration in Virginia. At one point it developed into a face-to-face controversy between Governor Price and Senator Glass.

When Glass had finished his statement in the committee room, jumped to the door sills with Roberts supporters, Price arose.

"May I just make this statement?" he said. "Senator Glass is entirely mistaken about this appointment. The only thing I know about it was when Mr. Keenan (an assistant to the attorney general in Virginia, a White House contact man) called me and asked what I thought about Judge Roberts and I told him I thought he was a capable man and judge."

Glass got to his feet again.

"We here are not that simple," he said in an angry voice. "We know perfectly well that the (Keenan) was told to talk with the governor of Virginia because he (the governor) had the veto power."

Price said published reports that he had been given a "veto power"—and he denied he had anything to do with such reports—meant "a very empty honor because all the patronage had been distributed and there was no more to distribute when I became governor of Virginia."

The senate vote, first announced as 14 to 3 but later corrected when Senator Logan (Dem. Ky.) had cast his ballot for disapproval, sends the Roberts controversy to the senate where it may under the rules, be taken up later.

Flurry of Snow Is Seen in Hope Friday, Quickly Melting

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—A general snow storm struck Arkansas Friday making highway travel hazardous and dropping temperatures to freezing and below.

At Fort Smith, where more than 6 inches had fallen, sunshine was reported before noon.

At Bentonville and Batesville, in the northern section, lows of 26 degrees were reported Friday.

"Slack and almost impassable" roads were reported around Fort Smith, and the state highway department had trucks on U. S. 71 near Mountainburg to pull motorists over "tough places." A bus driver on Highway 47 south of Fort Smith turned back after finding six or seven cars stranded.

Social Security Taxes Decline 25 Per Cent From 1937

WASHINGTON.—(P)—Internal revenue collectors in Arkansas totaled $7,854,893.69 during the calendar year 1938 as compared with $8,024,119.68 in 1937, officials of the Revenue Bureau disclosed Thursday.

The federal income tax yielded $4,162,503.32 in 1938, a gain from the $4,132,239.96 collected in 1937. Corporation income taxes gained, jumping from $1,895,561.62 to $2,004,781.79, while individual income taxes dropped from $2,295,878.33 to $2,157,721.53.

Pay roll taxes dropped from $1,930,537.42 for 1937 to $1,490,494.81 for 1938. Miscellaneous internal revenue collections (including receipts of postmasters from the sale of documentary stamps and of customs collectors from the excise tax on imported liquors) increased from $1,961,342.30 for 1937 to $2,201,895.47 for 1938.

Pennsylvania passed Illinois as the second biggest federal taxpayer in 1938, the report showed. New York retained first place paying $1,187,356,390 of the $5,507,613,359 collected by the Internal Revenue Bureau in all states.

Germany Signs Up for Jews' Relief

Mass Emigration Plan Agreed to by Hitler's Government

BERLIN, Germany.—(P)—Dr. Helmut Wundt, Field Marshal Goering's personal representative, Thursday initiated a secret document giving German reactions to a program for mass emigration of German Jews.

After three weeks of conversations here, George Rublee, American director of the Intergovernmental Refugee Committee, said he hoped for a "very great improvement in the situation."

A German spokesman said he felt certain that if "but a few important nations with land available" accepted Rublee's proposals for planned mass emigration, the German government would be found "probably surprisingly generous" in its contribution.

He hopes Rublee's proposals would find favor with at least a few governments but he did not expect all the 32 nations in the Intergovernmental Committee to agree to proposals aimed at opening up vast areas in certain countries for Jewish settlements.

Before leaving for London, Rublee reviewed the work of himself and his two aides, Joseph Cotton, Jr., and Robert T. Bell.

Details of the program will be given to the international committee when it meets in London February 13, he said.

TERMS REPORT LIE

Totalitarian Nations Threaten Panama Canal and Rio Grande

ROME, Italy.—(P)—The United States embassy Friday asked the Italian government for an explanation of the bitter personal attack on President Roosevelt published in the Fascist press.

WASHINGTON.—(P)—President Roosevelt termed a "deliberate lie" Friday the statement that he had said the American frontier is on the Rhine.

The president, at his press conference at which he restated America's foreign policy informally, also described as a lie the report that he had said the American frontier is in France.

The chief executive declared some reports of his conference with the senate military committee last Tuesday had given an erroneous impression of this nation's policy.

He added that most of these reports had been manufactured by some "deliberative and newspaper-owned agitators, and that they were a deliberate misrepresentation of existing facts."

The president's lengthy discussion of foreign policy followed a question which suggested that some people were confused about what actually took place at the conference with the senate military committee.

The president said the question of secrecy about the conference was 100 per cent bunk.

Dictators Strike Back
ROME, Italy.—(P)—Germany, Japan and Italy will have to counter any extension of the United States' frontiers into Europe by pushing their own defense lines not only to the Panama Canal but also to the Rio Grande, Virginia Gayda, Fascism's chief newspaper spokesman, declared Friday.

The attack was part of an intense hostile press campaign provoked by versions of the president's meeting Tuesday with the senate military committee.

Mystery of Life Alike at 6 or 60

"To God. In heaven. Up in the sky."
That was the only address on the envelope. The childish scrawl of the writing helped the Minneapolis postoffice people to trace the letter back to 6-year-old Bobby Lewis.

The letter inside the scrawled envelope was simple. It read:
"Dear God:
When I go upstairs, please let me see Floydie."

Floyd, you see, had been one of Bobby's pals. He was only 4, while Bobby was 6. So when Floyd underwent an operation, Bobby was concerned with all the big brotherly instincts of a 6-year-old for a little boy who was his friend.

Floyd died, but Bobby couldn't understand, quite. All his 6-year-old mind could grasp was that Floyd had gone, somewhere far away. "Upstairs?" "In heaven?" "Up in the sky?" So the child-mind expressed it.

Bobby will grow older, as 6-year-old boys do. He will go through school, and perhaps college. He will go through a period of cynical young manhood, and hard-boiled middle-age. He will see many of his friends die.

Philosophy will come to his aid, with many a high-flown theory about life here and hereafter. Like Omar, he may frequent doctor and saint, but like Omar he may find that ever he "came out the selfsame door wherein he went."

When he is old and bent, weary with years and battering and philosophy, someone else dear to him will die. And Bobby, be he ever so venerable, will find himself sloughing aside all the fancy trappings of his philosophies and murmuring "To God. In heaven. Up in the sky."

It is the great irony of life that Bobby may live to 60 or 106, and never get closer to the inscrutable mystery of life and death than he was as a little boy.

The Family Doctor

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Research Has Discovered What Food Disagrees With Most People

Innumerable surveys of diet and health indicate that certain foods much more likely to disagree with healthy people than are others. The vegetables of the cabbage family are among the leaders in this list. Garlic, onions and cocolate are closely associated.

When 1000 healthy persons were questioned as to the foods which disagreed with them, the vast majority stated that cabbage was responsible. Both cooked cabbage and raw cabbage have been blamed. Some of the people said that the cabbage responsible was overcooked.

From a scientific point of view it has been found that the strong flavor of hot cabbage, cauliflower, and turnips is probably due to the setting free of sulphur compounds by the ferments. Long cooking of vegetables in the cabbage family tends to develop disagreeable flavors and odors, including also the development of an increased acidity.

When the vegetables are cooked from the first in cold or tepid water, the plant enzymes that are present will decompose the sulphur compounds.

If the vegetables are placed in boiling water in an uncovered kettle and cooked for the shortest possible time to produce tenderness, these effects do not occur.

Investigators in the Division of Food and Nutrition of Ohio State University tested the effects of cauliflower and cabbages on 20 different people and found that 95 per cent were affected by the various methods of preparation.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

Liberal Macaulay After 100 Years

The term "liberal" has been handled so often that today it seems too slippery to take hold of. It has become increasingly vague with use. The liberal of 1939, for instance, is a far cry from the liberal of 1839.

This is the point Richard Croom Beatty drives home in a timely study of one of the greatest "liberals" the world knew just a century ago. "Lord Macaulay" (University of Oklahoma Press; 53). You will find the book fully as engaging as was the orator, scholar, author.

Thomas Babington Macaulay caught the public eye before he was 8. He did it with his "Constitution of Universal History." Thereafter he seems never to have lost his hold on success, turning out best-selling essays, histories, rising to high posts in the British government and Parliament.

It was as statesman that Macaulay advanced the particular brand of liberalism of his day. On one hand stood the solid conservatives, the landowners, and on the other the radical lower classes demanding labor unions, public education, regulation of wages and hours. Macaulay, as leader of the Whigs, represented the middle. He fought for the Reform Bill of 1832.

But while Macaulay wanted the franchise for the lower classes, he sought to protect "the sacred institution of property" from these same classes because he considered them unstable. Never once did he consider the responsibility of property owners to society.

Such was liberalism 100 years ago as Mr. Beatty reveals it in a book which turns out to be both good history and biography.—P. G. F.

Ode to Woodrow Wilson

Like a great star your light shall shine
On high,
Out of a laden moon-forsaken night
That hangs o'er earth forever now that
You are dead.
Yet in your golden message of man's might, I read
A new and dazzling prophecy.
I glimpsed the sun-crowned peaks of Ideality,
I saw the dumb world sleeping stolid-
ly,
Waiting your word to work and fight,
For liberty, for peace and right.
So now I know the gods yet walk with men,
Sending in you across those troubled
years,
Another Galahad with strength of ten;
Another Lincoln, king among his pens.
You have "gone West"
But to you, Eastern sky reflects your light.

Your work can never die!"

February 3 marks the anniversary of the passing of Woodrow Wilson, the 28th president of the United States, and I can find no more beautiful tribute than that paid to him by Dr. E. E. Violette who will be remembered for his inspiring sermons and splendid lectures he delivered in our city some ten years ago. February 3 also marks the birthdays of a number of mine and your friends in our city, and to them we extend our best wishes.

In her message to the chapter, Mrs. Clark stated that the local chapter's reports as read by her at the National Convention, recently meeting in Tulsa, Okla., was awarded the H. W. Eckhardt loving cup as being the most instructive and comprehensive report given in the allotted time of five minutes for the district with a membership of 2000. Another pleasing report from the National convention was that the remainder of the fund from Heeler W. Church will, in which provisions were made by him for the Arkansas Daughters, will be sent in check to the division. The legacy amounts to $770.86 and will be placed in separate fund to bear interest until the 1939 convention decides to what use it shall be put. Mrs. A. F. Exaltation in Religious Experience

Text: Acts 2:12-18, 36-41

The new-found hope and faith that animated the disciples, as they discovered that their crucified Lord was not dead but risen, attained its climax as they were gathered together on the day of Pentecost.

Just how so large a company of people happened to be gathered together is not made clear, especially as many of the company apparently were not Christian disciples. Some had gathered out of curiosity or even with a spirit of hostility, and when the strange manifestations of speaking in tongues and other incidents that have often marked highly emotionalized religious experience occurred, they were inclined to scoff and to suggest that those so emotionally aroused were drunk.

But Peter met the charge very squarely, and in his great sermon so brought home to the consciousness of his hearers their responsibility for the rejection and crucifixion of Jesus that many of them turned to the new way of faith with repentance and sincerity.

One recalls, as we now have it in the New Testament, a later admonition of Paul to the early Christians—"Be not drunk with wine, where in is excess, but be filled with the Spirit." The filling of man's soul with the Spirit of God brings a great experience of exaltation.

In some respects we may view these extreme manifestations of emotion on the day at Pentecost in much the same way that we would view such manifestations as they have occurred frequently in connection with religious revivals or in religious services where the emotional element has been strongly emphasized.

But the important thing about Pentecost, in contrast with some of these other occasions, is that beneath all this emotional excitement was a deep and sound moral and spiritual realism. There is no value in religious emotionalism that is not either the expression, or the result, of sound morality and spiritual awakening. In fact, it becomes a real menace to true religion when such experiences are exalted to the neglect or disregard of the essentials of Christian truth and of Christian living.

Through the ages the church has been more ready to emphasize and emulate the excesses of emotion at Pentecost than to repeat in its life the due prelates of devotion and turning to God. Both the church and the modern world need the reproduction of Pentecost, but it is the Pentecost of deep and thoroughgoing religious experience.

Power from on high is as realizable and effective an experience for Christians today as it was for those assembled on the day of Pentecost.

NO TIME TO MARRY

BY ELINORE COWAN STONE
COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday, Cynthia accused Janet of not loving Barney. That night Barney comes home, appearing more tired and haggard than Janet has ever seen him. It was alarming.

CHAPTER XXIV
JANET choked down an impulse to cry out, "What is it, Barney? What has happened?"

Instead, she said with an artificial brightness for which she hated herself, "Dinner's practically on the table, Barney."

"Could it wait?" Barney asked. "I—there's something I'd like to get off my chest before we eat."

"Why—I'll see." She tried to speak quietly.

In the kitchen she said to herself angrily, "Don't be such a fool! There's nothing to be worried about."

"Will five minutes do?" she asked when she went back. "I guess the peas will take it."

"It will do to cover the high spots."

He had dropped wearily upon the davenport, his long legs spread before him. Janet sat down not far away, a little stiffly, her hands folded in her lap to keep them from shaking too much.

"Well, Jan," Barney said, his grin twisting as he spoke, "you see before you a gentleman of leisure. In other words, your husband has joined the ranks of the unemployed."

"Oh?" Janet said, her voice thin and wooden in her own ears. "It's almost funny," Barney went on. "Here I was, the wise guy who knew the inside story of city graft, national corruption, and international trickery, and I didn't even know what was going on behind the scenes of my own sheet."

It seems, Janet, that the News has been on the skids for several months. The owner was counting on private loans to see it through the woods. Well, the loans were coming from someone who had good reasons for keeping that story of mine out of print."

"But I don't understand," Janet said faintly in a moment. "Then why did they publish any of it?"

"Well, the owner's been hunting somewhere in the wilds where the interested parties couldn't get to him at once; and it wasn't till a day or so ago that old Owl-face, himself, really knew any more about the financial angle than I did. . . . Now he's out on his neck, poor devil, with me at his heels for good measure. . . . I could have stayed if I'd sold them the rights to the story and let them print it with the hot parts killed to save their yellow faces. . . . But, Janet, I couldn't."

"Of course you couldn't," Janet cried hotly. "Anyhow, you'll get another job in no time."

"Oh, sure!" He said it a little too carelessly as he lighted a cigarette. "It isn't a job I'm worried about. It's—what a flop I have turned out to be, Jan—after all the tall talking I've been doing."

SUDDENLY Janet knew she couldn't bear the look in his eyes any longer—angry, yet shamed and beaten, above his careful smile—as if apologizing to her, begging her to understand. With a soft rush she was beside him; and taking his head in her arms, she piloted it on her breast, her cheek against his forehead.

"Oh, Barney, darling!" she murmured. "They can't do this to you! I love you too much."

"When you really love a man," Cynthia had said, "you feel like his mother sometimes. That's one way you know."

For a moment Barney sat motionless. Then he lifted his head and looked at her, and as if completely satisfied, drew a deep breath, dropped his head again, and put his arms around her.

"This is the way it ought to be, Jan," he said. "The rest of it doesn't matter now."

But it would matter again, Jan knew, terribly. And so she held him all the tighter.

So they sat, without knowing how long, while the peas dried up on the top of the stove, and the soufflé burned to a crisp. Finally they went out and dined on steak and mushrooms at the Auberge, because, Barney said, there was nothing so good for the morale as spending money when you hadn't any.

Not that it was quite as bad as that. The rent, at least, was paid for a month. Janet had her monthly stipend. . . . Barney winced a little when she mentioned that, but said, "Sweet! We may need it." And Barney still had a little money in the bank. It would have been plenty, he said, if he hadn't had to make that chase across the continent on his own time because the boss had decided the story wasn't worth following up after all.

BUT it developed that jobs were not growing on every tree. The other papers had already reduced their staffs. Barney made one or two trips to neighboring towns where he knew editors, only to come back with his grin a bit more strained each time.

In the next few weeks Janet learned a great many things she had never guessed, even during those comparatively pinched last months with Aunt Mary.

She learned that one laundry bill may completely wreck a week's budget, and spent several back-breaking days over the tubs in the basement. She learned that, if windows are always there, purpose, they must be washed from time to time; and that it is entirely possible to do it yourself, clinging with one hand and working with the other while you hang suspended over a dizzying abyss.

She learned to elbow her way about crowded, untidy markets, because they are the ones where food is cheapest. She learned that 50 cents for the electric meter may seem an enormous item, and that some people can't afford roses, even at 25 cents a dozen.

The first time Barney found her on her hands and knees, scrubbing the kitchen floor, he turned white, lifted her bodily out of the way, and finished the job—somewhat splashily—himself. Janet laughed at him.

"How did you think these things usually got done, you crazy Irishman?" she asked. "I suppose you imagined the Little Folk came out of their hiding every night and did the day's chores for poor but deserving housewives. We're lucky to have plenty of water to wash the floor with. Where Cyn is, they buy it in barrels."

NEVERTHELESS, they got on famously till the day Barney skidded on an icy road. The bill for his own car was $17, besides $87 for the car he hit, and the liability insurance had lapsed the day before because, Barney reasoned, there was no use spending money for insurance if you drove with reasonable care.

The morning after Barney told her that, Janet said, trying to sound very matter of fact, "I think we'd better plan to move the first of the month. While I was marketing yesterday, I saw some places advertised on 32nd Street for half what we're paying here, and—"

"You're not going to live on 32nd Street?"

"And why not?" Janet tried for a note of cheerful practicality. "It's convenient to all sorts of things. . . . More so than this—"

We can take something unfurnished and get some of Aunt Mary's things out of storage."

"When we move from here," Barney said through tight lips, "it will be because we're moving to something better."

Nevertheless, Janet did go house-hunting next day. She did not wear her fur coat this time; but a shabby tweed suit and an old hat.

THEATERS

At the Saenger
"The Dawn Patrol," Warner Bros. great aviation epic of the World war will be the Saenger theater's feature presentation Sunday. The brilliant and all-male cast is headed by Errol Flynn, and Basil Rathbone, David Niven, Donald Crisp, Melville Cooper are featured with him, as well as a large cast of others. The picture will open here on Friday.

It is a tale of the heroism and tragedy that were the daily portion of the brave young knights of the air who engaged in aerial combat over the western front during the early days of the World war.

Specifically, it is the story of one squadron of the British Royal Flying Corps during several fateful months of 1915—the story of an endless stream of gallant but untrained youngsters who reported blithely to squadron headquarters and then sallied forth unflinchingly to almost certain doom; and it is the story of the soul-searing torture suffered by the few older and adequately trained members of the squadron as they were forced to witness and even abet this awful sacrifice of the flower of Britain's youth.

As one of these comparatively veteran flyers, Errol Flynn has a role which obviously gives him an opportunity to display in full flower, the personality and acting talent that have made him such a tremendous favorite on the screen.

All that dash and elan which are associated with his name are required in the many scenes depicting the thrilling aerial dogfights and bombing raids in which he and his comrades take part. But he is also given an opportunity to display hitherto un-revealed gifts for emotional acting in scenes which are tremendously moving because of their powerful undercurrent of restrained yet strong, virile, honest, masculine emotion.

Brilliant Cast.

While Flynn is the star, "The Dawn Patrol" is by no means a one-man show, for around him was assembled perhaps the finest all-male aggregation of talent ever to be placed in one picture. The headlines among his fellow players are Basil Rathbone, David Niven, Donald Crisp, Melville Cooper, Barry Fitzgerald, Carl Emond, Peter Willes, Morton Lowry, Michael Brooke (the Earl of Warwick) and James Burke. A guarantee that the talents of this cast are utilized to their utmost effectiveness is seen in the fact that the director was the noted Edmond Goulding.

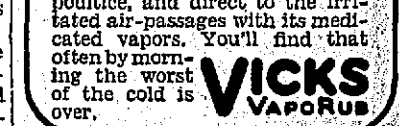

Briefly the plot, based on a story by John Monk Saunders and made into a screen play by Seton I. Miller and Dan Totheron, relates the soul

Max Schmeling Arrives in U. S.

Fighter Denies That He Is Bad With the Nazi Authorities

NEW YORK. —(P)—Max Schmeling came back to the United States Thursday ostensibly for a 10-day visit, but still considerably pleased at the prospect of picking up a good American dollar or two for a prize fight appearance.

As cagey as a 'possum the former world heavyweight champion parried questions concerning his rumored trouble with Nazi authorities, denying everything, and, in spots, countering questions with questions. When it was over, one and all agreed Max missed his calling—he should have been a diplomat.

Max, however, is definitely not a politician. He flatly stated as much when he was asked any question even faintly concerning politics. Under this head, he classed such queries as whether he had ever threatened to 'break' Propaganda Minister Goebbels' neck. If the latter should pay attention to Mrs. Schmeling, or whether Goebbels had been beaten up by friends of actress Lydia Baarova.

"All bunk, absolutely silly," he declared. "You reporters are funny. Why do you ask me these things? I'm no politician. Ask a politician. Why don't you ask the German ambassador?"

His beetled black brows lifted slightly when he was informed the German ambassador had departed these shores some time ago.

"Why did I come over on a French boat (the Normandie)?" he repeated a question. "Well, why not? I've crossed the ocean 20 times. Last time it was on an English boat."

That the purpose of the current trip wasn't exactly a joy ride came out very early in the interview. First Max Schmeling asserted flatly that he had not been sent to this country by the German government to quite rumors that all was not well between the Schmeling and Nazi leaders.

"I came over," he added, "for eight or 10 or 14 days to say 'hello' to my friends and pay a little visit. I have not been in a concentration camp, and I have not been detained or questioned by Nazi authorities. Only six weeks ago I was at a dinner which Goebbels also attended."

"I will fight again if I have the chance to meet the fighting heavyweight," he went on to fight Joe Louis again. "I think I can beat him. I don't want to quit the ring with a defeat."

Promoter Mike Jacobs has been in touch with him for some time, Schmeling added, and there is more than a slim possibility he will prolong his stay to do the gloves again. He and his trainer, Max Machon, who made the trip with him, were closeted with Mike Thursday afternoon, but inasmuch as the promoter has a light-heavyweight title bout between Tiger Jack Fox and Melio Bettina in Madison Square Garden Friday night, he was making no announcement that might take headlines away from that show.

Still No Solution

RAISING A FAMILY

By Olive Roberts Barton

Some Old Folks Can't See That Conditions Change

Aunt Mame came to call Aunt Mame was the matriarch of the family. She told all her great-nephews and nieces how to conduct their affairs, and the worst of it was that almost all the time she was right.

But once in a while she was wrong. She had another falling too. She never allowed an ounce of leeway for human nature or conditions. A slip in any direction and it was just too bad, as far as Aunt Mame was concerned.

Today she came in, shook the snow off, and let Emma take off her gossamer. A cup of hot tea thawed her nicely, but Emma noticed with misgiving that the frozen lines about her mouth were still fixed. There was something on Aunt Mame's mind without a doubt.

"I was thinking," she said at last, that Jimmy is big enough to help you now, Emma. Brother Jake was exactly his age when he started his paper route. Jake got up at five every morning, rain or shine, and worked for hours before breakfast.

As he grew older he was taken into the office as printer's devil. And from then on, he rose to the top. He became one of the biggest publishers in the country.

"But don't you know, they took of all the boys under sixteen in this state? Jimmy couldn't sell papers if he tried. Indeed he did try."

"Nonsense. That silly. Well, if that's the case, why doesn't he get a job as errand boy? The grocer might be able to give him a job."

"He tried that, too. You see all deliveries are by truck now. And boys his age are not allowed to drive. He helped to fix the stock on Friday and Saturday night, but one of the older men complained. He had been laid off and he said boys had no business working he said jobs that belonged to men."

"He could sell something. And you are handy at baking. Why can't he drum up trade after school selling pies and cakes? It would put an extra penny in your pocket, and dear knows you need it."

"We tried that, too. But the bakers and said we would have to take out a license. They make the fee very high here, so people can't under mine the store trade."

"Hump," said Aunt Mame. "Let me see. He could shovel off pavements. He is strong and he's fourteen."

"He tried that, too. Some men who have contracts with customers gave him a shove one day and told him to scram. He was underbidding them. People won't pay a boy what they pay a full grown man. He had to give it up."

"In the spring he could help farmer."

"I suppose so, without pay. Our labor laws are pretty strict here. I guess I'll just have to wait until Jimmy is sixteen or so before he can help me."

Aunt Mame said, "Here's a check for twenty-five dollars. I'm glad I'm seventy. This country was a good place once."

Woman, 91, Chides the Timid Swimmers

LONG BEACH, Calif. —(P)—Most Californians give up ocean bathing during the winter months, but not Mrs. Ella McCulloch—despite her 91 years. She is a familiar figure in the surf here at all times of year.

"The water only gets down to 56 degrees," she says. "The way young folks act, you'd think it had ice in it."

Willisville Girls Win 15th Straight

Win Over Ashdown and Mineral Springs for Title Honors

ASHDOWN, Ark. —The Ashdown senior boys, Mineral Springs senior girls and the Willisville junior girls clinched championships for their respective divisions of the Southwest Arkansas Basketball Conference in games here Thursday night.

The Panthers beat the Mineral Springs boys, 49-19, the Mineral Springs girls defeated the Ashdown girls 45 to 22 and the Willisville junior girls won over the Ashdown quintet 29-18.

Jester of Ashdown led scoring in the boys game with 18 points, followed by Rosenbaum with 12 and Spates with mine. It was the ninth conference win for the Panthers.

Scoring for Mineral Springs in that game was led by Bell with five and Coleman with four. Guards Dillard and Willard were the spa's outstanding players.

In the senior girls game, Bradford of Mineral Springs led scoring with 17 points, closely followed by Garner with 16 and Stuart with 11. Gentry and Walgreen of the Pantherettes led the locals attack with eight points each.

The spa team completely outclassed the Ashdown girls to take their eighth conference win out of eight games played.

Herbert Garrett's Willisville junior girls won their second game of Thursday with their triumph over the local girls. Thursday afternoon they defeated Mineral Springs 41-8.

The 11-point margin of victory the junior girls had over Ashdown was their smallest of the season, according to Garrett, who has high hopes for the team in state competition.

Thursday night's game was the fifth consecutive win of the season for the Willisville team, Garrett said.

"Reading the label" is an important part of the business of shopping for clothing and materials. And informative label is the silent salesman who tells the prospective customer the truth about goods for sale.

The government has purchased its supplies by measurements called Government Standards for many years, but it has been only within recent years that the public has become conscious of these measurements.

So many new fibers and mixtures of fibers are on the market that it becomes increasingly difficult for the consumer to select the fabric that best suits his or her needs and income.

It is necessary to know what fiber is used if the best wear is secured from it. Then the consumer will know how to launder, press and care for it. Synthetic fibers, such as rayon, hemberg, acetates and spun rayon may serve a useful purpose, but it is unfair to pay the price of silk and wool for these fabrics. This is especially important to the low income consumer who must make every cent count.

According to Miss Sue Marshall,

Sleeping at Her Birthday Party

Five-year-old Maxine Yarrington, sleeping sickness victim, turns unseeing eyes from the birthday cake offered by her father, Lloyd Yarrington of Erie, Pa. The child, in her mother's arms, "celebrated" her birthday by taking the liquid diet she has received since 1935.

extension specialist in clothing and household arts, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, a satisfactory label on piece goods should give the used. Is it cotton, wool, silk, rayon, hemberg, acetate or spun rayon? If made of a mixture, what is the percentage of each fiber used? The amount of weighing of size sizing used. The thread count number of threads to the inch in the wrap and filling, this determines the strength and appearance of the cloth. The tensile strength—the pounds of weight a one inch strip of material will bear before breaking for both the wrap and filling. It should be nearly equal for longest wear. Weight per yard. This also helps to determine the strength in most cases. Color fastness. It should be fast to sun and washing. Shrinkage, it should not shrink more than one-half of one per cent.

When the consumer learns the meaning of these terms and the value of this information to him or her, then shopping mistakes can be reduced to a minimum, Miss Marshall added.

Household Hints
Mattresses need some protection to keep them in good condition. To keep the home-made mattress clean and to protect it, every bed should be provided with a slip cover for the springs, and to protect it, every bed should be provided with a slip cover for the springs, and a mattress pad and a slip cover for the mattress, according to Miss Sybil D. Bates, specialist in home industries, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

Mattress pads can be purchased or can be made at home from home-grown cotton at a small outlay of cash. A mattress pad for a standard size bed should measure 54 by 72 inches. To make the pad, 8 yards of bleached domestic will be required although feed sacks may be used instead of domestic. It will also take 2 to 3 pounds of cotton (carded), four spoons of No. 40 or 50 cotton thread, and 8 yards of bias binding.

Miss Bates gives directions for making the pad. Cut fabric into 4 pieces 2 yards in length. Sew two pieces together to make the bottom and two together for the top. Press the bottom and top before starting to quilt. Place paper on the floor. Spread the piece for the bottom of the pad out on the paper. Lay carded cotton on the bottom as for a quilt. Place the top piece over the cotton, making sure that the corners of the top hit the corners of the bottom. Pin the outer edges together. Baste the top and bottom together. Make long basting stitches. Make the rows of basting about 5 inches apart.

Adjust the sewing machine for quilting. This may be quilted in squares or diamonds. Space the rows of quilting 1 1/2 inches apart.

After the quilting is completed, bind the edge with bias binding.

Don't Make a Bogey-man of Papa, Mamas Advised

LONDON. —(P)—Qualities which constitute the ideal father have been outlined by Doctor D. H. Geffen, Medical Officer of Health for Enfield. For instance:

"Before and during the first months of his child's life the father must be sympathetic and tolerant, be prepared to give up much of his leisure to his wife."

"Fathers should not insist on having the radio blaring forth, to the detriment of the child, and should remember that it is harmful for children to be in an atmosphere laden with tobacco smoke."

"It is the mother's duty to see that father is not held up to his children as a 'bogey-man.'"

England Worries Over Lack of Roof Thatchers

LONDON, Eng. —(P)—Property owners in England who maintain quaint cottages and houses with "thatched" roofs are worried over the dearth of expert thatchers.

A survey reveals that there are only 400 straw thatchers in the country, and another 130 "reed" thatchers in Norfolk.

Most of these workers are old men. It is feared that unless young people learn the industry the picturesque thatched roof will gradually disappear.
